Course Structure

The workshops are designed to teach the students, in a fast and fun way, the three core competencies for communicating as a public speaker: delivery, structure and material.

Part One - Aims and objectives: To teach the importance of delivery in a speech and, in particular, how we connect physically with our audience through our voice, eye contact and body language. Components include:

- An introduction to the course: Explaining the relevance to young people of being a good speaker
- Student introductions: The students introduce themselves and mention something they feel passionately about
- Impromptu Speaking: Why developing the ability to think quickly on your feet is so important (including an exercise in which students have a chance to talk without preparation for 30 seconds)
- Top Ten Tips: Quick and easy to remember tips on how to improve as a speaker
- Evaluation: The students receive immediate feedback, concentrating on the qualities they already have as speakers and the areas in which they can improve.

Part Two - Aims and objectives: To teach the importance of structure in a speech, in particular, how the structure provides the framework to allow us to connect intellectually with our audience. Components include:

- A speaking game: This allow the students a chance to use their imagination and warm up
- Giving and receiving feedback: An explanation of the relevancy of giving and receiving quality feedback and explaining the correct format in which to do so
- Giving a prepared speech: The students learn about the importance of preparing a speech and have time to develop their first speech, based on the subject they know best "This is Me". (Each student speaks for up to one minute, using their first simple structure)
- Evaluation: The students receive a short evaluation in which they are offered ideas to improve their introductions and conclusions. The students will also feedback to their fellow students
- Giving a revised speech: The students have the chance to prepare a second "Speak Out" speech, so as to develop their ideas around a structured framework.

Part Three - Aims and objectives: To teach the importance of content in a speech, in particular, how delivering our stories within a framework, allows us connect emotionally. Components include:

- A speech contest: The students are introduced and deliver their third speech in front of the class and the judges
- The presentation of certificates: The first three students, plus the two Most Improved students receive a winner's certificate, all of the students receive a high quality Jack Petchey Foundation "Speak Out" Challenge! Certificate of Achievement.
